Graduate SHOWCASE 2016
10-14 May
uwl.ac.uk/graduateshowcase

Featuring work across all UWL Schools and Colleges

@UWLshowcase #UWLshowcase
As a University committed to the education of creative professionals, the Graduate Showcase is a shining example of our ability to excel across a range of disciplines.

The combination of distinctive, creative activities, all developed within a collaborative context, highlights the great value we place on curriculum design and career focused learning.

In addition, the Showcase helps our students to stand out from the crowd and succeed at an assortment of imaginative and artistic endeavours. I am sure you will appreciate the fabulous array of talent on show – all of which demonstrates the capabilities of our students.

Professor Peter John
Vice-Chancellor,
University of West London
London College of Music (LCM) is the largest specialist music and musical theatre institute in the UK. Students at London College of Music are fully engaged in every area of the music and performance industries including production and management in the arts.

With a blend of conservatoire and university education plus state-of-the-art facilities, LCM makes this dream possible for our students by placing music at the core of Classical, Jazz and Popular Music Performance, Composition, Acting, Musical Theatre, Music Management, Music Technology, Live Sound and Theatre Production.

LCM has had a very successful year of events with LCM Camerata performing Ongilash by Luis Zubillaga at the Oxo Tower; two new musicals, Six Nights in Naples and Dracula written by staff; our first operatic production - Dido and Aeneas; ‘LCM Expo 2016’ which centered around our unrivalled network audio enabled studio and performance plus introducing audiences to Weston Hall, the central performance space at the heart of UWL.

We have also been proud to work alongside The English Chamber Orchestra, as our ‘ensemble in residence’, The Band of the Coldstream Guards, National Youth Orchestra and National Jazz Orchestra as well as countless music industry professionals participating in our Masterclass series.

The Graduate Showcase 2016 offers opportunities to see our students from across all courses within the College, as well as a range of work on the Graduate Showcase website.

In addition to Graduate Showcase 2016 there is still more to come including final year performance projects, Electric Music Season, LCM Prizes, lunchtime concerts and three major productions - Punk Rock, Bad Girls and Assassins.

We hope you enjoy the performances.

Sara Raybould
Director
London College of Music (The London)

The Graduate Showcase production team includes sound, lighting, stage management, front-of-house and a myriad other elements too numerous to mention here – but all of which is the work of our LCM students.

Please note that we also have a graduate Jazz and Pop evening hosted by the UWL Students’ Union Tuesday 10 May, 8.30pm in Lawrence Hall. All are welcome to join the party.

For more information regarding events either pick up a booklet or go to uw.ac.uk/lcmlive or to join one of our ensembles register at LCMJoinIn@uwl.ac.uk
Graduate Showcase is the perfect example of how postgraduate, undergraduate and the greater LCM community come together, as they do throughout the year, to present high quality, professional, creative projects and performances.

Professor David Osbon, Head of Postgraduate study at LCM

My experience at LCM has prepared me for a career in the creative arts and has given me skills that will allow a broader career choice in the future. I thoroughly enjoyed my time as a student and SU rep.

Helen Pritchard, level 6 BA Acting and student Rep. Elected SU Sabbatical Officer Education 2016/17

LCM Expo 2016 was a fantastic opportunity to realise my project which brought together students and technology from across LCM. I am delighted that some of this ground breaking technology will be utilised during the Graduate Showcase 2016.

Xenos Barrett
LCM student and Expo Network and Technical Manager

Electric Music Season
This year’s Electric Music Season will feature live projection of student compositions in 7.1 surround sound in Weston Hall on 28 April from 7pm. This will be by students from the MXA Advanced Music Technology course.

On 29 April, there will be Sound Installations by students from the Interactive Music Technology module. Visit at any time between 11am and 2pm to experience and interact with cutting-edge sound technology: play a laser harp, walk through an immersive surround-soundscape, control synthesizers and soundscapes with hand gestures, experience a relationship between colour and sound, create your own music tracks with interactive interfaces.

The season will end with live performances in Weston Hall from 5pm on 29 April. There will be live coding and sound generation from a bank of guitar effects pedals, solo guitar performance with a loop-based interactive music system. You will also experience a composition generated from the sounds of the audience.
The London School of Film, Media and Design has a distinctive institutional heritage and an excellent track record in nurturing world-class talent and we’ve been doing it for over half a century. We are based in Ealing opposite Ealing Film Studios in west London, which is 20 minutes from the West End – a world centre for the creative industries.

Our students are award-winning because they make a difference. We only choose people who have something special to offer, people with a particular impetus and imagination. People who, with the right sort of support in our School, will grow in confidence and dare to be different.

Our curriculum in arts practice and workbased learning enables our alumni to challenge the competition head on. It is project-led, underpinned by industry, and characterised by innovation and excellence.

Our courses are delivered by educators and industry practitioners who have a very clear vision of what constitutes success in their field.

Now, with the fantastic re-development of the St Mary’s Road site, and the imminent launch of the new London School of Film, Media and Design, our students will have even greater opportunities to make a success of their future careers. The Graduate Showcase 2016 is in effect our new school manifesto, one that reflects our students’ entrepreneurial flair and their very real ambition.

Paul Lohneis
Head of School
London School of Film, Media and Design

Our 2016 Graduate Showcase kicks off with a gala presentation of some of the best work from our BA (Hons) Film Production course. All our courses are student-centred and industry-focused and have been developed over many years by the award-winning film practitioners that teach and run them. The aim is to give our graduates the practical skills necessary to work and succeed in this exciting, and highly competitive industry.

We believe in learning through the hands-on practice of making films. Our graduates have previously gone on to the National Film and Television School, garnered OSCAR nominations, and are gold medal winners at the OSCAR Film Graduate Awards held annually in Los Angeles. We are based at the heart of the UK film industry, with Twentieth Century Fox, Pinewood Studios, SKY, BBC, and Endemol amongst our many alumni employers.

In the school, we like to think of ourselves as a community of people who love film and filmmaking, and we have a strong extra-curricular and student-led film culture that includes screenings, visits from well-renowned industry practitioners and work with our own production company W5 Productions.

Please join us at our annual highlight: the School student showcase film screening.
Showcase is probably my favourite event of the year. It’s always so good to see how students pull together ideas and skills they’ve learned over the last three years into amazing, thought-provoking work. It’s the diversity that impresses me most—the range of artworks and industry-oriented outputs that testify to the originality, intelligence, and critical curiosity that the UWL experience can foster.

Jeremy Strong, Professor of Literature and Film

Showcase is a really great opportunity to reflect upon what we’ve achieved during our time at UWL and to see what students on other courses have been up to, as well. It’s a great excuse to celebrate everybody’s hard work!

The School of Computing and Engineering has gone from strength to strength, fulfilling a significant number of its set objectives during the previous academic year, and continues to do so in the current academic year. The results of the National Students Survey in particular were extremely encouraging and, with an overall satisfaction rate well above the sector average, demonstrate the quality of our services and the education that we offer.

The current academic year has witnessed massive improvements in terms of the School’s laboratory facilities and equipment as well as the quality of the teaching and learning provisions. The School possesses dedicated laboratories which are directly linked to undergraduate and postgraduate teaching and learning as well as satisfying the requirements and standards of the accrediting professional bodies. New additions to the School facilities include a brand new workshop and design space in the Architecture Studio, a new Soil and Geotechnics lab and a new Concrete Technology Testing Laboratory.

The School is entering an exciting phase with the development of employment-focused education to provide our students with industry-relevant skills and knowledge. In order to support our continued growth and deliver a first rate student experience, we have to ensure that our programmes are linked to industry and are able to anticipate future demands. To this end we currently operate two Industry Consultative Committees (ICC), one for the area of Built Environment/Civil Engineering and the other which was recently developed for the Computing subject group. The committees support and facilitate dialogue between industry experts, professional bodies and academia and open up new avenues of collaboration in terms of research projects, guest lectures and project site visits.

We are proud to report that the School successfully engaged with Amazon Web Services (AWS) and was one of the first universities to receive an invitation to join the AWS Educate programme. This programme is Amazon’s global initiative to provide students and educators with the resources needed to develop students’ Cloud-Computing skills. We are already incorporating Amazon’s world-leading Cloud Computing technologies and solutions into our computing courses.

EXHIBITION
With our specialist courses and our research we seek to enhance academic and practical skills development, knowledge transfer and consultancy and training. With most of our courses accredited by professional bodies, we ensure that the degrees we offer enable graduates to enter the job market prepared for careers as professionals.

This exhibition will showcase a sample of our students work, including poster presentations of projects they undertook, live software demonstrations on PCs and mobile devices, architectural simulations, physical models and more.

We hope you enjoy the exhibited work and the discussion with our students and staff. We look forward to your feedback.

The talent and dedication of our students is visible; their inventiveness and creativity tangible. I look forward to the exhibition every year.

Professor Thomas Roth-Berghofer
The School of Human and Social Sciences includes five distinct and fascinating subject areas Psychology, Substance Use and Misuse Studies (SUMS), Social Work, Nutritional Therapy and Forensic Science. Our courses offer our students an insight into the human condition. Through the dedication of our staff, many of whom underpin what they teach with their own research, our graduates are prepared to go out and make a difference to society.

This is the first year our students have taken part in Showcase and I am delighted that they will be able to demonstrate to the rest of the University and the wider community their talent, enthusiasm and engagement with their subject areas. This year, our Graduate Diploma in Psychology and MSc Health Psychology students will be displaying their research posters, students from the Substance Use and Misuse Studies course will be taking part in the radio podcasts, and students from Forensic Science and Nutritional Medicine in the films you will see at Showcase.

But this is just a small part of what our students do. Many are stalwarts of the University’s volunteering V Team and dedicate hours of their free time, others volunteer for the Mentoring Service, peer mentoring students in the years below them. All of them are about to become this year’s creative and enterprising graduates of whom we are all rightly very proud.

Dr Maddie Ohl
Head of School
School of Human and Social Sciences

"The research and project work produced by students in the School is of the highest quality and in a number of cases students have been supported by staff to get their work published and to present at academic conferences. We are delighted to be a part of this year’s Showcase in order to proudly celebrate with the UWL community, the outstanding achievements, talent and creativity of our students."

Professor Marcia Worrell

Exhibition will include:
- Research Poster display (Graduate Diploma in Psychology students)
- Radio podcasts (Substance Use and Misuse Studies students)
The Claude Littner Business School was launched in October 2014. The school offers high quality accredited programmes, with new exciting courses being offered from September 2016. The school provides an excellent student learning experience by utilising innovative learning pedagogies and creating excitement and curiosity. We are extremely proud that Claude Littner, the well-respected British business executive, has bestowed the University of West London the honour of associating his name with the Business School. Claude is a former student of the Business School and dedicated supporter of the University of West London. We are delighted to celebrate his continued involvement with the University and to harness his expertise with our vision to connect business education with the business world.

Our courses are designed to combine academic studies with cutting edge global practices used within the business and finance industries. We have regular visits, talks and masterclasses with senior managers and directors from a wide range of large and small businesses from a wide range of companies and industries who can impart knowledge and share their work experience, current management thinking and problem solving with our students. We have embedded enterprising and problem solving skills in our curriculum. We always strive to create a dynamic and interactive experience for our students. We facilitate our students to take full ownership of their learning journey and together we help them build core entrepreneurial skills. For example, we use simulations in our teaching to help students apply theories into the real world. We also blend interactive learning tools such as blogs, instant polls and discussion forums with our lectures to enhance and continue the learning process outside the classroom and to stimulate creative responses. The Graduate Showcase will demonstrate some of these endeavours.

My experience at UWL has been beyond phenomenal, filled with welcoming staff and many great opportunities. With that said, the amazing memories and experiences that I will cherish and learn from will stay with me for a lifetime. Thank you UWL.
COLLEGE OF NURSING, MIDWIFERY AND HEALTHCARE

The College of Nursing, Midwifery and Healthcare will be joining in the Graduate Showcase for the first time in 2016. It has been a fantastic year for our graduates and the work they have produced has been exceptional.

We will be showcasing some of the best posters from our final year BSc (Hons) Nursing and BSc (Hons) Health Promotion and Public Health students. I hope they are enjoyed by the wider University and our guests.

The students from BSc (Hons) Health Promotion and Public Health will be holding the inaugural student-led conference on 8 June. The theme of the conference is positive mental well-being which is extremely relevant.

Charmagne Barnes
Dean
College of Midwifery and Healthcare

Despite their anxieties, the students are now getting to grips with their leadership poster design; they now understand that the task is not just about completing their assessment, but that it will result in a “real” personal and professional plan based on what they have learned, which can be applied to their everyday lives, both in and outside of work. It can also be referred to very positively in job applications and interviews and so its value is sustained long after assignment submission. Some of the formative work already presented is very promising and we are looking forward to seeing the final results of the students’ endeavours.

Exhibition will include:
- A Poster display (Nursing and Health Promotion and Public Health students)

The London College of Hospitality and Tourism (LCHT) is well established as a leading centre for aviation, tourism, events, hospitality, food and culinary arts education in the United Kingdom, with an international reputation, and a significant number of national and international partners. In the academic year 2015-16, the College runs its 68th year of operation as a centre of sectorial excellence offering a wide range of university education provision from Level 4 (first year undergraduate) to Level 8 (PhD studies). With over 1,500 students, LCHT is one of the largest colleges of the University of West London. The College was recently reorganised and its new vision is to provide a great learning experience and balanced curriculum in hospitality and tourism by enthusiastic staff who manage to realise their true potential in teaching, research and enterprise.

The industry continues to recognise the quality of the College’s provision, and the attributes and knowledge the students gain. Students’ outcomes enable them to find employment across the service sector both nationally and internationally. UWL’s location in west London is ideal to contribute to the local economy in an area with a high density of hospitality and tourism companies in the UK. The College has also begun to capitalise on its proximity with Heathrow Airport, and has started to develop initiatives (including the Heathrow Airport Archive) that will benefit future developments. Moreover, many alumni, patrons and honorary degree holders in hospitality recognise the contribution of the College in university education and actively support it.

For this year’s Graduate Showcase, the College is providing an exhibition of the Heathrow Airport Archive that will be curated by students of airline and airport management; a screening by students of tourism management to demonstrate the emergence of film tourism; a display of posters created by students of gastronomy; a coffee station demonstrating and serving iced coffees staffed by students of culinary arts; a themed area created by students of events management; and the opportunity to visit a live themed evening in Pillars, our renowned training restaurant.

Recent UWL graduate Jennifer Santner was awarded with the prestigious Gold Service Scholarship award 2016. The Gold Service Scholarship is an annual competition for young, front of house professionals. Jennifer competed against seven other national finalists in a challenge which consisted of planning, preparing and serving a three course lunch, to a table of four industry experts.

I would like to congratulate Jennifer on this amazing accomplishment. Jennifer was an excellent student who always showed dedication to her studies at UWL. I am sure that she will continue to shine as a star in the exciting world of hospitality.

EALING LAW SCHOOL

At Ealing Law School, all courses are delivered by highly qualified staff who have a range of academic, practical and professional experience, and are designed to provide students with a well-rounded, skills-based and professionally relevant qualification.

The School offers a wide range of professional courses with a distinctive focus on work-based learning and law in action. The LLB (Hons) is a qualifying law degree which has been delivered for over 40 years, and is also accredited by the National Association of Licensed Paralegals. Criminology has been offered for more than 10 years, and we are especially pleased with new, innovative courses in Criminal Justice and in Sociology. We provide first class, up-to-date facilities with online recording of many lectures, a dedicated new mock courtroom in which students can practice advocacy, trial simulation and mooting, supported by a range of professional and social events and student societies.

All our degrees, undergraduate or postgraduate, are aimed to help students seeking the career of choice, whether they go into legal practice, the criminal justice system, business, research and planning, government or education.

In this, our first contribution to the Showcase, we aim to highlight our students’ impressive achievements with our radio podcast on issues of legal practice. In this context, the School runs the Legal Practice Course and operates one of the most successful law clinics in the country, the Community Advice Programme. The service is run by volunteer legal practitioners and is open to all students of the School who receive legal training to enhance their employability and understanding of the subject. It is a provision which informs the School’s philosophy of learning and aims to realise the potential of our students.

Phillip Ells
Head of School (acting)
Ealing Law School

My lecturers are approachable, friendly and genuinely devoted towards ensuring we are successful. I am grateful for all their support throughout the course and it is rather exciting to be able to have the Graduate Showcase to look forward to, in order to celebrate the past three years at UWL.

Sandy Duffy,
LLB Level 6 student

Our law and criminology students enjoy the combination of legal theory and practice. Seeing students light up with excitement while participating in a mock trial or getting involved with the Community Advice Programme has been very rewarding for me.

Dr Corinna Coors,
Associate Professor

Exhibition will include:
- Radio podcasts on issues of legal practice
In the last two years we’ve worked really hard to make UWLSU something you feel part of and can be proud of. I know we’ve still got a long way to go but I wanted to share some of our successes with you. These are things that you have helped us achieve and you should feel really proud: We were Shortlisted for NUS Higher Education Students’ Union of the Year award – making UWLSU one of the best in the country; and have been accredited by Investors in People – showing that we care about the students and support staff we employ.

We have a free advice service, where 200 hours have been devoted to giving over 500 students one-to-one advice, helping you navigate University regulations and get back on track to graduating. To make your academic experience even better, we’ve supported 450 course reps and three sabbatical officers, who have spent over 400 hours representing you in meetings and making your voice heard.

Over the last year we’ve sold a whopping 6,693 events tickets with all of the profit going back into more events and other projects for you in the students’ union.

As we are a non-profit organisation, every penny made goes straight back into services for you! For example we’ve invested £50,000 in 34 different sports clubs and societies in order to help you make friends, try new things and learn crucial team skills, and £133,000 has been used to develop our wonderful student staff. UWLSU are striving to help students’ wherever possible, and since 2014 we have saved UWL students £2,545,000 through discounts with NUS extra cards.

I think you’ll mostly agree that the students’ union works really hard for the needs of students at UWL, even if our services and activities aren’t something that you’ve taken advantage of. We’ve tried our hardest to include services that are relevant to you and we’re still working towards our 2018 strategy to make sure we keep getting better and in the end provide something for all students at UWL.

Josh Goddard
UWLSU President 2014-2016

The SU is extremely supportive and does everything they can to improve one’s university experience. There is a wide variety of events on offer and any sports club or society you could want.

Laura Oxburgh
Musical Performance

At UWLSU, we really do focus on the student journey. You are guaranteed to become more confident, make new friends and definitely develop personally and skills wise. An organization that cares.

This is an exciting time for radio with the advent of future technologies delivering on demand audio through platforms as diverse as handheld devices through to in-car streaming. Innovations in podcasting, gaming audio and radio station visualisation strategies mean that more and more audience led content is being generated, making radio a creative, energised and vibrant space in which to experiment.

With its sights firmly fixed on helping students achieve seamless transition from graduate to industry practitioner, Blast Radio, the official student station for the University of West London, broadcasts from two brand new, state-of-the-art radio studios that simulate the very latest in contemporary commercial radio operations. The luxurious teaching studio can comfortably accommodate 20 students, while an identical smaller suite means teaching and broadcasting can run parallel to each other.

Blast Radio is part of the fabric of the University, giving a voice to students across all Schools and courses. Students cover everything from local politics to radio drama, documentary and University sport fixtures, in a broad ranging schedule of music and speech and cutting edge formats. You can listen via the website www.uwlblastmedia.com, the TuneIn app: www.tunein.com/blastradio or on the FM dial on 87.9FM during an annual monthly RSL stint.

Since September 2015, our new Radio and Multimedia Audio Production degree has been running with Blast Radio at its heart. Our students are giving us extremely positive feedback as we continue to develop what we believe is set to become the leading undergraduate radio curriculum in the UK, with cutting edge modules and forward thinking ideologies delivered by a passionate and creative team of industry professionals and academics. You can read more about this exciting, innovative and future proof course here: uw.l.ac.uk/RMAP

Come up to the radio studios and take part in our exploratory interactive listening experiences, curated and produced by UWL students.

Advanced Performance Projects

Final year BMus students present a wide range of self-managed projects as part of their performance-based modules. These performances are the pinnacle point of the students’ time with us at LCM, and a lot of time and consideration is invested into them. For our pop performance students, projects are linked to a topic they have been researching, with subjects as diverse as “The Power Trio”, “Performance Anxiety”, and “The Development of Soul Funk”, right through to “Recreating Frippertronics”, “Falsetto in Hard Rock” and “The Fuzz Box: Then and Now”.

We also demonstrate the diversity of our students with rich, diverse and creative performances showcasing our classical and jazz students. These performances take place at a variety of venues including our own fabulous Lawrence and Vestry Halls along with a number of popular venues across London. The shows are open to the public, and are often used to showcase artists to record company A&R departments and live music promoters.

Public Health and Health Promotion Conference
The BSc Public Health and Health Promotion inaugural student-led conference will be held on Wednesday 8 June 2016, 10am-4pm at Paragon House, Brentford. The theme of the conference is positive mental well-being.

This conference is for all staff and students from the University of West London and beyond! Our aim is to bring together mental well-being experts, public health, health promotion and NHS practitioners from across West London; and future healthcare and public health professionals to focus on well-being in the workplace, mindfulness and all aspects of positive mental well-being.

This event is free but places are limited so book now (using the link below) to avoid disappointment!

Nutritional Research Forum

15 June 2016
Brentford site
Registration will start at 9.30am and the forum will run until 4.30pm

The UWL Nutrition Research Forum is an annual event which aims to provide current students with insight into the wider world of nutrition, food, health and wellbeing. Speakers tend to be research students, representatives from community and charity organisations, and practitioners. The intention is to highlight the evidence base for nutritional interventions, but also to provide students with opportunities for reflection, and networking as it relates to their future career goals.

The University of West London Alumni Association

The UWL Alumni Association is a global network of over 100,000 former students from the University and its constituent colleges. Together we support graduates in a wide range of ways, including networking opportunities, careers advice and volunteering opportunities.

Members can enjoy a series of benefits, including:

- A quarterly e-newsletter
- Bespoke alumni events and activities
- Annual magazine
- Special Alumni Card* to give access to the campus and Library
- Exclusive benefits and discounts on a wide variety of products and services
- The University’s Careers and Employment Services for up to three years after graduation
- Volunteering opportunities through our Graduate Mentoring scheme.
